Willowick Resident Invents, Patents and Launches Teeter Toss, a Family Fun Outdoor Toss Game

Willowick, Ohio - September 6, 2009

Millions of Americans will play a variety of outdoor toss games this year. Because of Matthew J. Staton's new patent pending game Teeter Toss, families will have another fun and affordable choice.

Teeter Toss is similar to cornhole, a nationally played outdoor toss game. Unlike cornhole, Teeter Toss is played at a distance of 15 ft as opposed to cornhole's 27 ft. Teeter Toss also has two holes for twice the scoring opportunities. However, the biggest difference is Teeter Toss's unique patent pending teetering boards. Depending on where a tossed bag lands, the Teeter Toss board will teeter forward or backward. Teetering makes each throw different and allows for a player to utilize many different strategies for a whole new level of fun.

Teeter Toss's unique patent pending design also supports both vertical and horizontal play for many more playing options than standard toss games. Teeter Toss's high quality boards are manufactured in the United States and made to last for many years to come.

Give Teeter Toss a try today and you'll quickly see Teeter Toss is an easy to play family fun game for all ages.
